In this eight-week module, students explore the life of Frederick Douglass, the escaped slave and noted abolitionist who wrote Narrative of the Life of Frederick Douglass. The module focuses on the questions of what makes stories powerful and on understanding an author's purpose. In addition, students analyze how writers use figurative language and word choice to convey meaning. In Unit 1, a recommended read-aloud of The People Could Fly introduces the topic and the question that connects all three units in the module: What gives stories and poems their enduring power? Next, students build the background knowledge that will allow them to more fully understand the context of the Narrative: they learn about slavery, Douglass's life, and the debate over slavery in the United States before the Civil War. The Narrative is a compelling, complex, and somewhat lengthy text; in this module, students read five excerpts from the text. In Unit 1, they read the first two of those excerpts, building their capacity for making sense of this complex text and learning the routines that will guide their work for the remainder of the module. Then students study poetry about slavery. They learn how to read and analyze a poem, and are introduced to the tools that poets and other writers use to make stories powerful: word choice and figurative language. Unit 2 centers on the analysis of excerpts from Narrative of the Life of Frederick Douglass. Students read three excerpts, analyze how each excerpt served Douglass's purpose, and consider how he used language to convey meaning. They have consistent practice with short constructed responses that use evidence from the text. The End of Unit 2 Assessment is an essay in which students explain how the Narrative conveyed Douglass's purpose and distinguished his position from that of others (RI.7.6). In addition, students develop a clearer understanding of how sentences are constructed, and they use this understanding to help them read and write (L.7.1). In Unit 3, students write their own powerful story, using *Frederick Douglass: The Last Day of Slavery*¹ as a mentor text. They select one event from the Narrative and rewrite it as a picture book for younger students, making sure that the story they create is powerful, just as the stories they have been reading are powerful. This final performance task addresses NJSLs W.7.3, W.7.4, W.7.5, W.7.9, W.7.11, L.7.1, L.7.2, L.7.3, and L.7.6.

Guiding Questions And Big Ideas

- What gives stories and poems their enduring power?
- How did Douglass's purpose and audience shape how he told his story?
- When you write a story, how do your purpose and audience shape how you tell that story? How can you use language, images, and theme to give the story you write enduring power?
- Stories and poems have enduring power because they tell about important or interesting events, people, and places; they have themes that help readers understand the world and often empower people; and they use powerful language and powerful images.
- *Douglass wrote the Narrative to convince his audience that slavery should be abolished. He responded to the reasons that some people gave to justify slavery, and showed why they were mistaken.*

¹ This children's book is integral to several lessons in this module, and is widely available in public and school libraries. However, alternate lessons that use a free alternative children's book will be available on EngageNY.org and at commoncoresuccess.elschools.org to accommodate schools/districts that are not able to secure a copy of Frederick Douglass: The Last Day of Slavery.

Performance Task

Students write and illustrate a children’s book based on an episode from Douglass’s life, selecting the episode from the excerpts of Narrative of the Life of Frederick Douglass they read closely in Unit 2. First they revisit Frederick Douglass: The Last Day of Slavery (see footnote 1 on page of this document), which serves as the mentor text. After closely examining the model, students plan their children’s book. Before they begin writing, they present and critique their plans in small groups. Then the class transitions into workshop mode and the students use class time to draft their pages on storyboards. Students have several days to write. Within these workshop lessons, the teacher presents focused instruction on narrative writing techniques. The students also peer edit and revise portions of their storyboards. Toward the end of the workshop lessons, students evaluate their first drafts against the rubric and revise accordingly. They turn in the second draft of their storyboards for the End of Unit 3 assessment. While they wait for feedback from the teacher, the students begin working on their illustrations using some basic artistic techniques. Finally, based on the feedback they receive from the teacher, the students write a final draft of the text, which they add to the illustrated pages of their books. This task centers on NJSLs W.7.3, W.7.4, W.7.5, W.7.9, W.7.11, L.7.1, L.7.2, L.7.3, and L.7.6.

Content Connections

This module is designed to address English Language Arts standards as students read literature and informational text about slavery, abolition, and Douglass. However, the module intentionally incorporates Social Studies Practices and Themes to support potential interdisciplinary connections to this compelling content. These intentional connections are described below.

Big ideas and guiding questions are informed by the Common Core K–8 Social Studies Framework: <http://engageny.org/sites/default/files/resource/attachments/ss-framework-k-8.pdf>

Social Studies Practices, Gathering, Using, and Interpreting Evidence, Grades 5–8:

- Define and frame questions about events and the world in which we live and use evidence to answer these questions
- Identify, describe, and evaluate evidence about events from diverse sources (including written documents, works of art, photographs, charts and graphs, artifacts, oral traditions, and other primary and secondary sources)
- Analyze evidence in terms of content, authorship, point of view, purpose, and format; identify bias; explain the role of bias and audience in presenting arguments or evidence
- Describe and analyze arguments of others
- Create meaningful and persuasive understandings of the past by fusing disparate and relevant evidence from primary and secondary sources

Social Studies Key Ideas and Conceptual Understandings, Grade 7

- 7.2e Over the course of the 17th and 18th centuries, slavery grew in the colonies. Enslaved Africans utilized a variety of strategies to both survive and resist their conditions.
- 7.7b Enslaved African Americans resisted slavery in various ways. The abolitionist movement also worked to raise awareness and generate resistance to the institution of slavery.

Texts

1. Virginia Hamilton, The People Could Fly: The Picture Book (New York: Knopf Books for Young Readers, 2004), ISBN: 978-0-375-82405-0. (One copy per teacher; recommended, not required²).
2. Frederick Douglass, Narrative of the Life of Frederick Douglass, an American Slave (Project Gutenberg, 2006; originally published Boston, 1845; no purchase required³). <http://www.gutenberg.org/files/23/23-h/23-h.htm>.
3. William Miller, Frederick Douglass: The Last Day of Slavery (New York: Lee and Low Books, Inc., 1995), ISBN: 978-1-880-00042-7. (One copy per teacher; recommended, not required⁴).

Note: Several units include other poems and short informational texts that are provided in the lesson supporting materials; see unit overviews for details.

Note: For Unit 3, you will also need a collection of picture books related to slavery. The Unit 3 overview includes a list of titles, most of which should be easily located at your local library or at a bookstore (online or brick and mortar).

² The People Could Fly: The Picture Book is recommended, not required. Schools that do not have the ability to place additional text orders for this school year (2013-14) may choose to seek this widely available book through a school or public library. As an additional alternative, suggested free resources will be named in the lessons in which this book is used.

Managing texts and graphic organizers

In this module, the central text that students read is Narrative of the Life of Frederick Douglass. This text is available in its entirety from Project Gutenberg; the five excerpts students read are included in the supporting materials for the appropriate lessons.

Students will need to return to the excerpts multiple times and across all units. Consider how you would like students to organize these text packets and the note-catchers that accompany them so that students will be able to locate their papers as necessary. Consider setting up folders in the classroom where students keep any excerpts or graphic organizers they are not currently working with, as well as reference sheets and other handouts.

For schools with access to the complete book version of the Narrative of the Life of Frederick Douglass

If your school has access to the complete book version of the Narrative, consider the following possibilities:

- The complete text is an excellent independent reading book for strong readers. If you have students who wish to read the entire text, encourage them to start after the class has read the first excerpt (Unit 1, Lesson 8). Consider how you can help them apply the structures they use to read selected excerpts as a class when reading other parts of the text that they read independently (e.g. re-reading, focusing on Douglass' purpose, etc.).
- Consider asking students to read several additional excerpts from the Narrative. Chapters 10 and 11 are particularly compelling, and in addition to Douglass' escape attempt (Excerpt 5), detail Douglass' teaching other students to read at the Sabbath School, his work and fight in a shipyard in Baltimore, and his eventually escape to the North.
- Collaborate with your Social Studies colleagues to identify other excerpts of the texts they might use with students to reinforce key history content or concepts.

Recommended and Alternate Texts

This module uses two picture books that are recommended, not required. Both are widely available through the public library system.

Frederick Douglass: The Last Day of Slavery is used in Units 2 and 3 and serves as the mentor text for the performance task in Unit 3. This children’s book is integral to several lessons in this module, and is widely available in public and school libraries. However, alternate lessons that use a free alternative children’s book will be available on EngageNY.org and at commoncoresuccess.elschools.org to accommodate schools/districts that are not able to secure a copy of Frederick Douglass: The Last Day of Slavery.

If you use the alternate text, the lesson sequence stays exactly the same. But some of the components and supporting materials in those lessons change. You will find all alternate materials (lesson components and supporting materials) in one file, along with the alternative children’s book, on the Web sites listed above.

In each lesson that uses Frederick Douglass: The Last Day of Slavery, look in the teaching notes for guidance about which lesson components and supporting materials should be drawn from this file of alternate materials. The names of these supporting materials are very similar to those in the original lessons, but include “(alternate)” in the title of the material.

This module also uses a picture book called The People Could Fly: The Picture Book (Hamilton, 2004). It is used in Unit 1, Lesson 1 and then referred back to on several occasions. This book is recommended. Schools that do not have the ability to place additional text orders for this school year (2013–14) may choose to seek this widely available book through a school or public library. As an additional alternative, suggested free resources will be named in the lessons in which this book is used. See the Unit 1 overview for more details.

Media and Special Materials

In Unit 1, students build their background knowledge by reading texts from the website that accompanies the PBS series Freedom: A History of US. If possible, consider enriching these lessons through using the corresponding DVD (PBS, “Episode 5: A Fatal Contradiction” from Freedom: A History of US DVD 2002).

This PBS video series is not required for this module. However, it is an excellent resource for teaching American history to middle school students: the structure and content are more accessible than those of videos made for an adult audience, but they still do justice to the complexity and richness of the history they recount. Many libraries hold this DVD series; you also can purchase it on the PBS website.⁵ See the Unit 1 overview for more information about which segments of Episode 5 would be most useful.

In addition, the website includes not just the texts that students read but also images and quotes. If you cannot access the DVD but can access the website, consider having students spend time on the website exploring the additional materials it offers.

Pacing

The Narrative is a rich and complex text, and the time and amount of in-class support that students need to make meaning of it will vary. In Unit 2, an option is provided to adjust pacing to best meet the needs of your students. See the Unit 2 overview for more information, but you will probably want to make this decision fairly early in Unit 2.

Independent Reading

In this module, the central text is the important and demanding Narrative of the Life of Frederick Douglass. There is also a rich literature about this time and theme in American history. Since students are reading excerpts of the Narrative, rather than the whole text, it is especially important that they read a complete book for independent reading. The suggested texts list has a number of outstanding titles; consider how you might especially support independent reading in this module. If possible, consider doing literature circles with the independent reading books, as students will benefit greatly from the opportunity to discuss their reading with a classmate. Also, consistently help students analyze how their independent reading book and the Narrative “talk” to each other: How does reading one inform their understanding of the other?

⁵ If you go through the PBS teacher store, you can buy just one disc rather than the whole series: go to <http://teacher.shop.pbs.org/product/index.jsp?productId=2982619&cp=&sr=1&kw=freedom+a+history+of+us&origkw=freedom+a+history+of+us&parentPage=search>.

Preparing for Unit 3

You may wish to review the Unit 3 Overview as you begin to teach this module, so that you can gather books and art materials.

For Unit 3, you will need to gather a set of picture books related to slavery. As students write their own books about an episode from Douglass's life, they will look at other books as examples. The Unit 3 overview contains a list of suitable titles; you will need at least three different titles, and at least one book for each pair of students. Many of these titles will be found at the public or school library; others may be easily acquired. Depending on how you intend to procure these books, you may wish to start gathering them now.

In Unit 3, students will write and illustrate their own book, retelling an episode from Douglass's life. Consider which medium you would like your students to work in, and what materials you will need to do this. Consider partnering with the art teacher at your school. The Unit 3 overview includes suggestions and options; you may wish to review them now.

Final Performance Task	Crafting a Powerful Story: Children’s Book to Retell an Episode from Narrative Life of Frederick Douglass (with author’s note) Students write and illustrate a children’s book based on an episode from Douglass’s life, selecting the episode from the excerpts of Narrative of the Life of Frederick Douglass they read closely in Unit 2. First they revisit Frederick Douglass: The Last Day of Slavery¹, which serves as the mentor text. After closely examining the model, students plan their children’s book. Before they begin writing, they present and critique their plans in small groups. Then the class transitions into workshop mode and the students use class time to draft their pages on storyboards. Students have several days to write. Within these workshop lessons, the teacher presents focused instruction on narrative writing techniques. The students also peer edit and revise portions of their storyboards. Toward the end of the workshop lessons, students evaluate their first drafts against the rubric and revise accordingly. They turn in the second draft of their storyboards for the End of Unit 3 assessment. While they wait for feedback from the teacher, the students begin working on their illustrations using some basic artistic techniques. Finally, based on the feedback they receive from the teacher, the students write a final draft of the text, which they add to the illustrated pages of their books. This task centers on NJSLs W.7.3, W.7.4, W.7.5, W.7.9, W.7.11, L.7.1, L.7.2, L.7.3, and L.7.6.
Mid-Unit 1 Assessment	Using Evidence to Support Analysis: “Frederick Douglass” (RI.7.1) This assessment centers on NJSLs RI.7.1. Students read a text about Douglass, then answer selected and constructed response questions in which they analyze the text and support their conclusions with evidence from the text.
End of Unit 1 Assessment	Reading Poetry: Analyzing Structure and Language in “We Wear the Mask” This assessment centers on NJSLs RL.7.4, RL.7.5, and L.7.5a. Students read “We Wear the Mask” and answer constructed and selected response questions about structure, figurative language, sound and form.

Mid-Unit 2 Assessment	Analyzing Storyteller’s Craft: Comparing Written and Oral Stories, and Analyzing Purpose and Craft in Douglass’s Narrative (Part 1: RL.7.1, RL.7.7; Part 2: RI.7.1, RI.7.4, RI.7.6, L.7.4a, b, L.7.5b, c). In Part 1, students reread a poem from Unit 1 (“Harriet Tubman”), and then watch that poem performed live. They analyze how a storyteller uses her body and voice to convey meaning. In Part 2, students read a new excerpt from Narrative of the Life of Frederick Douglass and answer constructed and selected response questions about the meaning of specific words, Douglass’s word choice and use of figurative language, and how this excerpt serves his overall purpose.
End of Unit 2 Assessment	Essay: Analyzing Douglass’s Position in the Narrative (W.7.2, W.7.4, W.7.9b, RI.7.1, RI.7.2, RI.7.6). Students write in response to this prompt: “In his Narrative , Fredrick Douglass explains that his purpose is to throw ‘light on the American slave system.’ Which aspects of slavery does his Narrative bring to light? How does his position differ from that of those who defended slavery? How does he use his story to support his position?”
Mid-Unit 3 Assessment	Part 1. Writer’s Roundtable Standards: SL.7.1b, c, d In preparation to write the first draft of their story, students create a planning guide and bring that work and several questions to a focused small group discussion at which each author presents his or her work and gets feedback on key questions such as: How well does my storyboard capture the significant events of the story? I’m thinking of “zooming in” on these moments—are they critical to the story? Which events should I illustrate? What might those illustrations convey? Is my thematic statement appropriate to the story? Students revise their work based on peer commentary. Part 2: Sentence Structure Quiz Standards: L.7.1a, b, c; L.7.2a Students complete a quiz about conventions.
End of Unit 3 Assessment	Second draft of Storyboards for the Children’s Book Standards: W.7.3, W.7.9, W.7.11 Students turn in the second draft of the children’s book, which is written on storyboards. The first draft has already been revised (during Lesson 8) based on peer feedback and self-assessment. Following the teacher’s feedback on their storyboards, students write the final drafts of their text on their illustrated pages for the final performance task.
