All About Me

I have been teaching for 27 years and this will be my 23rd year in Orange. I was born in Ecuador but grew up in Union City, New Jersey. I have a Bachelors in general education and also hold a Masters degree in urban education with a specialization in English as a Second Language. I have also been teaching at the college level for over 20 years and hope to continue doing this after I retire. I currently live in Pennsylvania and am the proud mother of two girls. Lupe is about to be 26 and Samantha will be 17. Overall, I can say I chose my profession because I love what I do but teaching those who are limited in English is something that is really close to my heart. Once I was in my students' shoes and it wasn't a very good feeling. It was then when I decided to make a difference and by doing what I do, I feel that I am somehow making their lives a little bit better. Persistence and the motivation to make our dreams come true is my motto and it is what I like to instill in our students. The road to success is not one that comes easy but it takes the right people to push us in the right direction.
