NAME PRACTICE

Handwriting Without Tears Style Font
BY MARSHA MCGUIRE DIFFERENTIATED KINDERGARTEN

I Can . . .

1. Trace my name with a colored pencil, starting at the dot in each letter.

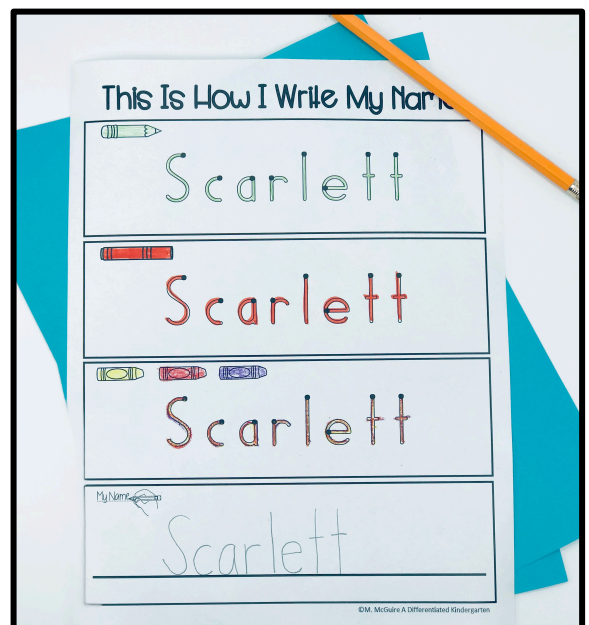

3. Trace my name completely with one crayon, then a second different crayon, and finally a third different crayon.

2. Trace my name with a marker starting at the dot in each letter.

4. Write my name by myself on the line using a pencil.

This editable product will provide your students with a variety of ways to practice writing their names. I selected this font specifically because my students come to me struggling with where to start their letters. The dot in this Handwriting without Tears-Style font gives them that starting point. Students will trace their name with a colored pencil first, then with a marker, then with three different colored crayons, and, finally, they will write their name on their own.

This packet includes an 'I Can . . . ' visual sheet to help your students complete this activity independently.

Please note: To use this editable product, you must first download and install the latest version of Adobe Reader. This is a free download that you can search on Google. Once you have done that, please restart your computer. Now go and download and save this file onto your computer. Once the file is saved, please right click on the file and when it prompts you to 'open using . . .' please select 'Adobe Reader.' You should now be able to start loading your names you would like to use below. Please note, the longer the name, the smaller the letters will appear.
